Indian Removal

General Anthony Wayne's successful campaign of 1792 through 1794 against Ohio's Indians ended forty years of war and border raids in the Ohio Valley. In August 1795 General Wayne and the Indians signed the Greene Ville peace treaty whereby the Indians gave up about two-thirds of the present area of Ohio, opening the state to white settlement. Although the Indian tribes continued to occupy the northwestern part of the state above the Greene Ville Treaty line, surveyors, land speculators, settlers, and developers moved into the newly-opened country. As increasing numbers of people sought their share of Ohio lands, squatters began trespassing on the Indian reserves, and the government began expressing a desire to acquire land on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. As a result, in 1803 President Thomas Jefferson made the first direct and official proposal for removal of the Indians to the west, arguing that the Indians would be free from white interference in the west and would never have to face the loss of their homeland again.

In a letter that year to Governor William H. Harrison of the Indiana Territory, Jefferson revealed his attitude toward the Indians and their removal:

This letter, being unofficial and private, I may with safety give you a more extensive view of our policy respecting the Indians . . . Our system is to live in perpetual peace with the Indians, to cultivate an affectionate attachment from them, by everything just and liberal which we can do for them within the bounds of reason, and by giving them effectual protection against wrongs from our own people. The decrease of game rendering their subsistence by hunting insufficient, we wish to draw them to agriculture, to spinning and weaving . . . When they withdraw themselves to the culture of a small piece of land, they will perceive how useless to them are their extensive forests, and will be willing to spare them off from time to time in exchange for necessities for their farms and families. To promote this disposition to exchange lands, which they have to spare and we want, for necessities, which we have to spare and they want, we shall push our trading uses, and be glad to see the good and influential individuals among them run in debt, because we observe that when these debts get beyond what the individuals can pay, they become willing to lop them off by a session [sic] of lands . . . In this way our settlements will gradually circumscribe and approach the Indians, and they will in time either incorporate with us as citizens of the United States, or remove beyond the Mississippi. The former is certainly the termination of their history most happy for themselves; but, in the whole course of this, it is essential to cultivate their love. As to their fear, we presume that our strength and their weakness is now so visible that they must see we have only to shut our hand to crush them, and that all our liberalities to them proceed from motives of pure humanity only.

Should any tribe be fool-hardy enough to take up the hatchet at any time, the seizing of the whole country of that tribe and driving them across the Mississippi, as the only condition of peace, would be an example to others, and a furtherance of our final consolidation.

During the administration of President James Monroe (1817-1825), a definite removal policy was presented to Congress, seeking the increased westward expulsion of Indians from east of the Mississippi. The government negotiated treaties in which millions of acres occupied by various tribes were ceded to the U.S. government. The Wyandots alone relinquished title to 4.5 million acres. The Miamis ceded 6,700,000 acres in Indiana and 297,000 acres in Ohio.

Because of the continued occupation of their land by white people and curious to see what the west had to offer them, some Ohio Indians emigrated without waiting for an organized removal. For example, some Shawnee, Delaware, Kickapoo, and Cherokee bands settled in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, and Missouri. However, not all Indians could bring themselves to leave their homeland in the Indiana and Ohio territory. The government, mistakenly assuming the Indians themselves would prepare to emigrate, did little to formally organize the tribes to move. It was not until the election of Andrew Jackson that formal removal plans were initiated.

Jackson was elected president in 1828, having campaigned on Indian removal among other issues. As president he quickly urged passage of the Indian Removal Bill which gave him the authority to secure the removal of any tribe "residing within the limits of the states or otherwise." Government agents were again sent to negotiate treaties with the Indians. In March, 1831, President Jackson commissioned Colonel James B. Gardner to convince the Indians in the Ohio area of the necessity of the removal. The Indians to be affected by Gardner's mission were 500 Wyandot, 600 Shawnee, 200 Seneca, and 300 Ottawa, who owned 370,000 acres of land in the state. Gardner was authorized to offer them "1,500 blankets, besides 150 each of plows, hoes, axes, and guns; to pay the expense of the removal — all at an estimated 30 dollars a head" (Grant Foreman, The Last Trek of the Indians, 1946).

The actual removal of the Indian tribes spanned several years. The moves were often poorly planned and badly executed by contractors with no previous experience. For example, one group, the Ottawa of the Maumee, agreed on February 18, 1833, to emigrate westward. Not until September 1834 was someone sent from Washington to oversee their removal. Due to the reluctance of the Indians to leave their homeland and the delays by the government, their actual move did not start until August 1837. Another tribe, the Wyandots, sold 16,000 acres of land to the government for $1.75/acre in January 1832. However, by 1840 the tribe still had not moved west. In March of that year Colonel John Johnston was appointed as commissioner to negotiate with them. When this tribe of 674 Wyandots left in July 1843, they were the last Indians to leave Ohio as a result of the Jackson administration's Indian Removal Bill. As a result of government delays, many of the other tribes' departures were made late in the year during the winter. Cold, wet weather, inadequate clothing, shelter, and food supplies for the Indians and their horses, and diseases such as measles, cholera, and fevers resulted in extreme hardship and misery. Many old people, young children, and the sick died on the way. Travel was arduous, as evidenced by the Seneca of Sandusky who left their homeland for Oklahoma in October 1831. During their journey to Dayton they were exposed to almost incessant rain and severe cold; on some days they were unable to struggle more than four or five miles over bad roads. Unfortunately, other tribes also travelled at a slow and dangerous pace. Although many Indians travelled to the west by land, others were transported westward by overcrowded canalboats, steamboats, or riverboats, generally from Cincinnati. Regardless of their mode of transportation, whiskey peddlers and horse thieves followed almost all the removal groups like birds of prey. Dishonest, greedy traders presented exorbitant and fraudulent claims to the government for goods supposedly supplied to the Indians, and the government eventually paid many such claims from tribal annuity monies intended for the Indians. The process of Indian removal was a sad last chapter to the history of Indians in Ohio.

Speckled Snake, an aged Creek more than 100 years old, could have been speaking for all the Indians who had been or were to be displaced from their homeland when he made this speech in 1829. With resignation and bitterness the old man said:

"Brothers! I have listened to many talks from our great father. When he first came over the wide waters, he was but a little man . . . very little. His legs were cramped by sitting long in his big boat, and he begged for a little land to light his fire on . . . But when the white man had warmed himself before the Indians' fire and filled himself with their hominy, he became very large. With a step he bestrode the mountains, and his feet covered the plains and the valleys. His hand grasped the eastern and the western sea, and his head rested on the moon. Then he became our Great Father. He loved his red children, and he said, 'Get a little further, lest I tread on thee.'

Brothers! I have listened to a great many talks from our great father. But they always began and ended in this — 'Get a little further, you are too near'."

Western Reserve Draft Book

The names of 293 pioneers and land developers of northeastern Ohio can be found in the Western Reserve Draft Book, recently microfilmed by the Ohio Historical Society. Genealogists and other researchers will find many of those names preserved today in the names of the townships, villages, and cities of the area.

The Connecticut Land Company, in 1795, purchased from the state of Connecticut three million acres of land in the Western Reserve, an area extending 120 miles west from the Pennsylvania border and from the 41st parallel north to Lake Erie. After spending about two years surveying the territory and marking it off into five-mile-square townships, the Land Company conducted the first of several lotteries, or drafts, to sell the land to speculators.

The first draft was held in January 1798, with entire townships sold by lot. Individual investors or groups of investors paid $13,000 for each township, approximately 16,000 acres. The use of the lottery meant that those buying several townships might find them in several different locations within the territory. Later drafts were conducted in 1802 and 1807. In 1809, the final draft was held to dispose of the remaining lots.

The Western Reserve Draft Book contains a record of proceedings of each of the land drafts. The names of each of the buyers and the tracts of land they purchased are included in this record which, for many years, had resided in the office of the Clerk of Courts of Trumbull County. In the fall of 1980 the clerk, Clare O'Brien, allowed the Ohio Historical Society to borrow the book so it could be microfilmed. The microfilm edition is now available in the reading room of the Society's library in Columbus and in the American History Research Center at Kent State University.

The Mode of Making Partition of the Western Reserve determined upon by the Connecticut Land Company at their Meeting held at Hartford, by adjournment on the first Tuesday of April 1796—

Resolved, That after so much of the Western Reserve as is free from Indian Claims, shall have been surveyed into Townships, according to the third Article of our Constitution, the Proprietors shall at a Meeting of said Proprietors legally convened for that purpose, elect and appoint three or more Judicious persons, who, or a majority of them shall be a Committee, to divide said parts of said Reserve, according to its relative Value — And for that purpose, said Committee shall, as soon as may be, go upon the said Lands, and shall view and explore the same; and shall then select from the Lands which shall not have been previously disposed of by our Directors, Four Townships in said part of said Reserve, which they Judge to be of the greatest Value, on account of their Situation, natural advantages & which said Four Townships shall, by said Committee, be divided into Lots of such size as they shall Judge proper, not less than One hundred Lots in each of said Towns, — And each and every Person or Persons, entitled to one or more shares of said Reserve (each share being one four hundredth part of said Reserve) shall be allowed to draw, in the order hereafter mentioned, by Lot for each share by him or them held, one or more Lot or Lots in said Towns as said Committee shall determine. — The Committee shall then proceed to make an estimate of the Remaining Townships as they shall Judge necessary to appropriate for equalizing said Townships — which Townships, thus selected, shall be the next in quality, and goodness, to the four Townships first mentioned. After which they shall ascertain the first remaining Township, or Townships, if there should be two or more Townships of an equal Value — they shall then set apart and annex to each Township of a Value inferior to the Township, or Townships,

Q^d last mentioned, so many Acres from some one, of the Towns selected for the purpose of equalizing as aforesaid, as they shall Judge necessary to make said Townships equal in value to the Townships or Townships next in value to the Lands selected as aforesaid: And the Townships which shall be selected for the purpose of equalizing as aforesaid, shall by S^d Committee be designated & made known by being numbered and also by being described by their meets & bounds, & each and every fractional part of said Towns, & each of them, shall also be designated and made known by being numbered, and also by being described by particular meets, & bounds, and said Committee shall also accurately state and describe, to what particular Townships, of inferior value each particular fractional part of said selected Townships is annexed, and also the number of Acres contained in said fractional parts - And said Committee shall cause said fractional parts of equalizing Townships, to be surveyed, & shall also cause said first mentioned four Townships, to be surveyed, and shall describe by number & by meets and bounds, each Lot in said four Townships, & shall also ascertain and determine the Number of Lots in said four Townships, which shall be drawn for by each Share or four hundredth parts. And in case it shall happen that said Lands cannot all be surveyed into Townships of sixteen Thousand Acres, said Committee shall annex to the part or parts of S^d Land, which cannot be surveyed into Townships of the aforesaid size, so much of the aforesaid Townships which shall be set apart to equalize said Townships of inferior value, as will render said part or parts which cannot be surveyed as aforesaid, equal in value to the best Town or Towns after said selected Towns - and said part or parts with the Lands annexed to them shall be considered, as Towns, and as such shall be drawn for upon the Division of said Property. And immediately after completing said valuation and allotment said Committee shall deposit with the Clerk of the Company, & complete and full report of their doings, which report shall by said Clerk, be recorded in the Company's books at full length - And said Clerk upon the reception of said report, shall notify the Directors thereof, who shall immediately call a Meeting of the Proprietors, for the purpose of division, & the business of said Meeting shall be specified in the Notifications thereof - At which Meeting, said entire Townships together with the Lands annexed to them, if any, and said part or parts which could not be surveyed into Townships, with the Lands annexed to them, shall be drawn for by Lots, which drawing shall be by putting the number of each Township, and also the number of each part which cannot be surveyed into a Township, into a Box, & in the presence of a Meeting said number shall by said Clerk be drawn against the Name of each Proprietor arranged in alphabetical order - And when there shall be several Persons who shall be entitled to one Township only, the number shall be drawn against that Partners Name who stands first in alphabetical order, and the Lots in said Four Townships shall be drawn for in the same Manner. -

If there should be any Proprietors who shall be entitled to a part of a Township, or a part of a Lot only, whether from the smallness of their Interest or otherwise, then and in that case, if so many Proprietors as shall be entitled to a Township or Lot shall agree to take a Township or Lot in Common, they shall have a right to draw for a Township or Lot upon the same principles - & in the same manner, as is above provided but if such Proprietors shall not agree to draw together for a Township or Lot, the Proprietors at said Meeting, shall appoint three persons, who shall determine what Proprietors shall join in drawing a Township or Lot, & said Proprietors shall draw accordingly, so that all the Property, shall be drawn by an Interest that has a right to a Township or Lot, & in such mode that each Proprietor, shall have his Just proportion of said Lands - And in case the Proprietors who shall jointly as aforesaid draw any Township or Lot cannot agree upon an actual partition, then the first mentioned Committee, or others to be appointed for that purpose, shall upon application of a major part of said Proprietors, at the expense of the Company, by going upon the Land or otherways as they shall judge proper, appoint and sett off in Severalty, to each Proprietor of each Town, or Lot, his Share and proportion in such Township, Lot or Tract, apparted as aforesaid, having reference to Quantity and Quality, and when said Committee, shall have apparted and sett off to each Proprietor his Share & proportion as aforesaid, said Committee shall lodge with said Clerk a description of each Proprietors Share or proportion therein ascertained, which shall be recorded by said Clerk - And in case the Committee that may be elected for the purposes aforesaid, or any one or more of them shall neglect or become incapable to perform the business of said Appointment, then and in such case, the Proprietors may at a Meeting warned for that purpose elect any one or more new Committee men, to serve in the place of such persons or persons as may neglect to Act or become incapable of Acting. -
